view the lifelike figure of an au-tomaton which daily may be seen taking the air on the front perch The people of the United States are on a "money drunk" not less disorganizing than alcoholic excesses. William Mather Lewis, director of the savings division of the Treasury Department, stated yesterday. Mr. Lewis addressed the annual meeting of the W. C. T. U. of the District at the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church.

"Despite the operation of the prohibition laws," he said, "there is still plenty of work left in America for a temperance association. There never was more intemperate speech and action than at the present moment. Intemperate spending and extravagance are so prevalent that our situation in these particulars has been referred to as a "money drunk" "These things are all manifesta-"
